Bottomless brunch leads to puking, urinating and other bad behavior outside New York bar — SEE THE VIDEO

A neighbor recorded a 10-minute drunken montage outside Flatiron District club Pranna, which offers unlimited cocktails and an entrée for $45. The post-brunch wreckage, he says, has to end.

Today's bottomless brunch specials include midday drunkenness, vomiting and indecent exposure.

A fed-up neighbor who lives next to what might be New York's drunkest brunch spot, Pranna, spent three weekends secretly recording sloshed customers outside the Flatiron District lounge.

The video completion includes intoxicated diners stumbling out of the bar, falling in the street, puking on the sidewalk and publically urinating — all in broad daylight.

At one point, a taxi that stops to pick up two patrons speeds off, its backseat door still open, when the driver realizes how hammered his would-be travelers are. Others are caught taking swigs from a liquor bottle directly outside the restaurant-turned-club.

Pranna's weekend brunch runs from noon to 7 p.m. every Saturday and Sunday, and drunken diners can enjoy an entrée and unlimited cocktails for $45.

"People can't walk at 6 p.m.? These bottomless brunches are really annoying to have to walk by puke, pee," the anonymous videographer told the news site.

The plastered montage comes from the same videographer who shot video of belligerent New York University student Gerry Shalam shouting "My father owns half of f----- Manhattan" earlier this summer.

The video's poster said Shalam walked out of Pranna before the outburst, but the bar denied any involvement.

The videographer added: "It just seems like these places promote getting stupid drunk in order to make money and then the people that live there have to live with the fallout. I'm sick of it."

A spokeswoman for Pranna told Gothamist the restaurant is aware of the video, and its owners have pledged to clean up the bar's brunch act.

Pranna said it plans to increase security and reduce the number of reservations it takes in order to control the inebriated crowd. It also said it's looking into limiting how much alcohol is served and hopes to meet with neighboring tenants.
